Abstract Drone

Abstract
This document presents research on an autonomous Abstract Drone platform for low-altitude aerial mapping. The aim of the project is to demonstrate reliable GPS-denied navigation using visual odometry and lightweight onboard sensing. Key findings include a 23% reduction in drift compared with a baseline dead-reckoning stack and successful flight trials over mixed farmland terrain. The main topic is autonomous drone navigation and mapping under constrained compute budgets.